CARNAHAN BROTHERS

Marion, Kentucky.

LETTER FROM HON. MARION F. POQUE

Light Is Dragging Along Much Feeling Has Been Aroused Over This Question.

ANY CHARGES OF SELLING OUT HAVE BEEN RUMORED.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 12, 1910.

Mr. Carnahan:

We are sorry that we can not make more progress for this year for not many measures have passed either houses, but we have been a busy week for the session, more than a hundred bills have been reported favorably and more than fifty unfavorable without expression. We have been successful in killing many bills brought before the public. More legislation and class legislation has been proposed this time than in any other session in our ten years of experience. Seven out of ten bills seem to be "killed" with some kind of job, or commission making a job for somebody. The situation of this writing is anything but encouraging to the tax payer. Appropriations are asked for to bankrupt the National Government, and the condition of the treasury does not seem to allow any check on the legislation any who conceives these jobs. So much pernicious legislation has been offered that the persons of professions effected thereby have been flocking here to express their opposition against the passage of the same. I will mention jailers, doctors, druggists, doctors, medical peddlers, dairyman, barbers, etc. But it is strange to me that I have got to meet a farmer who has come here at his own or anybody else's suggestion to help his member in legislation, in the committee, and is aimed at him, or to forward the passage of measures aimed to help him. Hundreds of farmers are here every week, look around at the sights and go back home apparently satisfied. I thought last week when four of us were battling in the committee on revenue and taxation to kill the proposed amendment to the constitution and the bill for a tax commission, and were trying to report favorably the bill to prevent double taxation, that if a score of farmers had come in and argued their side of the case, it would have been holding our hands up, and no doubt successful.

The farmers are sleeping on their rights when they send men to Washington to work for measures and leave the old Kentucky home guarded, open to the pillage of robbers at their very doors. It is like sending all the money away for foreign missions and neighbors children. This is a striking illustration, but is not over drawn. However hard your representative may work, you will wake up some morning and find a commission made up of representatives of other interests, and the tax on farm lands and other classes of property belonging to farmers raised to almost double the present rate. And all this in the face of the fact, that the farmers taxes are now higher in proportion to the real value of the property listed, than any other calling.

Still I find farmers who will not raise a hand to help the man who is taxed for the farm that he does not own, having paid but little, if anything on it. We have been unable so far to report a bill giving relief.

The anti abortion bill has passed the House and is very drastic, it will doubtless pass the Senate and do much good in keeping down this terrible crime which is increasing every year. The fish and game bill was killed in the House; it was very radical and as proposed, you could not fish or hunt off your own premises without procuring a license, however willing the owner might have been. It also created a commission of several paid officers and a game warden in each county. The fight over the bill was very spirited and resulted in some feeling.

The temperance fight is dragging along; two unsuccessful attempts to bring the County Unit Bill up in the House having been made and failed to get the two-thirds vote.

Much feeling has been aroused over this question. Many charges of selling out has been rumored, and the Senate is investigating the charge.

There is no doubt that some promises have been broken, some sacred trusts have been betrayed and an indignant constituency can only leave vengeance and retribution to Him that said, Vengeance is mine and I will repay.

No law could be made strong enough to punish this Treason of confidence. Only social ostracism will ever reach the evil; the same that you meet out to the highwayman and sneak thief.

PRACTICAL EFFECT OF TOBACCO AMENDMENT

What the Western Tobacco Journal Has to Say About the Stanley Amendment.

READ THE FOLLOWING REPORT—JUST ISSUED.

I am just in receipt of the Western Tobacco Journal of January 31, 1910. The Western Tobacco Journal has decided Trust leanings, and is critical and censorious towards all farmer's tobacco organizations. And yet, as will appear from the following article taken from the columns of the W. T. Journal of last Monday, Jan. 31, the amendment to the tobacco law, popularly known as the Stanley Amendment, during the first six months of its operation, created three hundred and forty-three more licensed tobacco dealers, who are purchasers of tobacco in the leaf, who are now purchasers of tobacco in the leaf, for re-sale at retail, whereas under the old law these same dealers could not and did not buy a leaf of tobacco for re-sale in the leaf at retail.

For under the old law all dealers had to pay a six cents tax to sell leaf tobacco by retail, whereas under the Stanley Amendment all dealers may sell tobacco, bought from the producer, in the natural leaf without the payment of one cent in tax. As will be seen from the article to follow, the 343 dealers, licensed under the Stanley Amendment, are scattered over twenty-four States. They have thus far sold one hundred and six thousand pounds of tobacco in the natural leaf. And this is a mere beginning. The sales of leaf tobacco will be cumulative will increase in geometrical ratio. And within a few years, it is my firm conviction, tobacco growers will have, instead of one Trust buyer, thousands of buyers of tobacco in the natural leaf. I trust every member will attentively read the subjoined article:

MONDAY WAS COUNTY COURT DAY.

Great Crowds of People Attracted Here From all Over Crittenden and Adjoining Counties.

MUCH FINE STOCK SUR-ROUNDED THE COURT SQUARE

The day dawned bright and clear and with the exception of a strong wind from the south, the day was all anyone could wish. The early riser, from the appearance prophesied a good day with the biggest February crowd for years. And they were not wrong. From sun up until noon the people seemed to pour into town from every quarter.

The North and South bound train bringing quite a number from Henderson, Morgantown, Sturgis, Blackford, Crayne, Fredonia and Princeton. Judge Blackburn convened the county court and in a short time disposed of the regular business docket, which was very light. Much fine stock as well as cheap, was exhibited on the street all around the Court square which made it look like a county fair.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Wm. (Bennette) Hamilton, wife of W. E. Hamilton was born February 4, 1849, died January 22, 1910, aged 60 years, 11 months and 13 days. She was married to W. C. Hamilton, January 18, 1856, with whom she lived a devoted and faithful companion for forty-four years. She professed faith in Christ at the age of sixteen, and joined the Baptist church at Pinkneyville, where she remained a faithful member until she united with the Cumberland Presbyterian church and remained a consistent and faithful member until death.

She leaves to mourn her death one brother, two sisters, husband and four children. She will be missed by all, but by none more than these. Five children have preceded her to that home toward which she has been looking for years, her health failed several months ago and she was confined to her bed most all the time. She suffered with lung trouble, but bore it all so patiently and was always ready to greet her friends with a smile and some pleasant word. As a Christian she was very devoted, as a mother none was more kind, and tender, she was a true and devoted companion ever faithful to her trust. Her husband and children never tired of administering to her wants.

Her funeral was preached by the writer in the Cumberland Presbyterian church at Blackford, of which she was a member until death, in the presence of a large congregation, after which she was laid away in Mt. Zion cemetery.

Rev. J. R. King.

"He'll outgrow that, Judge. You never will," remarked Dupuy, crossing to Nolan's side.

But under every system of free government," pronounced Bartelmy in his most judicial manner, "there have always been conservative and liberal parties, whose leaders, while they differed perhaps in method, have been stimulated by an equal love of country."

"That is true, Judge Bartelmy," said Brand, "but I can't concede that you belong to the conservative party."

The judge showed surprise.

"But I don't understand you," he exclaimed when Brand went on defensively.

"Are you not seeking to introduce into our country methods of government undreamed of by our forefathers?"

The judge laughed as though in genuine tolerance. His skill at verbal jousting was standing him in good stead.

"Oh, I had as much enthusiasm myself in my youth," he said, "but my own training has forced upon me a certain unimpassioned exactitude of thought. But come, come. We old lawyers have long since learned that we cannot carry our quarrels out of court. For instance, of a morning my dear friend Judge Cutler may be at my elbow, and the same evening my son may be at the club."

Nolan nodded his head understandingly.

"Yes, Judge, that's life, that's life," he commented.

"And the laws of our country are passed up in clubs," interjected Dupuy.

Bartelmy raised his head and made a gesture of disapproval.

"I wouldn't say that," he said. "Brand saw an opportunity to score."

Like the safest methods of cutting the trees are framed up in this, he shot at Dupuy.

Bartelmy pretended to side with Brand.

"That's not, Wheeler," he laughed. "He scored off you that time, Dupuy."

At a point where he was about to make the supreme effort to capture Nolan and the Advance to make them ready to him. He was about to say what Dupuy had truthfully termed the trump card.

"By the way, Mr. Nolan, Judge Cutler and I usually dine two or three times a week at the Oak Door club. We must you there. We should have a man in all our discussions of public questions."

Brand saw an opportunity to score. He should have a practical man of affairs who knows what reformers like to say, come friend here are really trying to get at. Still I propose you for membership."

Brand watched the effect of Bartelmy's words on Nolan with interest. It was an anxious moment.

Brand Dupuy and Bartelmy. They had accepted they felt that they were safe. As for Nolan he was very perplexed. He wanted to go to the office, both for his own sake and for a family's. Membership in the Oak Door club was equivalent to a ticket of admission into the fastest circles of the city. He would be able then to put his wife and daughter in the way of gratifying their desire. Sylvester, too, would be benefited in whatever business career he should take up, and the membership would enable him to meet and make personal friends the most prominent men of the city—the men he had always craved to associate with on terms of equality. Then he spoke.

"Really, Judge," he said warmly, "something that I never expected to hear from your lips."

"Not at all, not at all. I shall be glad to put you and Dupuy and myself in."

With pleasure," bowed the lawyer. He hesitated over his final reply. He remembered what Brand had stated regarding the attentions of Judge Bartelmy and his daughter. Probably Sylvester was a trick a little, and it might improve the situation to have Brand brought into it by the judge as a member of his nomination. Still, the judge had said that he accepted.

He did it with his eyes open, he said, but necessarily change the position of the Advance toward certain public men. Thus he reasoned, and still hesitated within him an insidious desire, even a prompting, in view of the advantages for himself and his family to accept of all hazards under the circumstances.

"Thank you, gentlemen, thank you," Brand temporized. In an endeavor to gain time before actually committing himself. He glanced across the room at Wheeler Brand, wondering how he was accepting the situation. Brand took a quick step forward, straightened himself stiffly and shot a glance at Brand over the shoulder of Bartelmy, whose back was turned to him. Nolan nodded his head slightly to show that he understood. Dupuy caught the meaning of signals, and he glared at Brand in the young managing editor. He saw that Brand would do his utmost to swing Nolan away from the subtle snare. Nolan addressed the judge, "I'll think it over and thank you once more."

Bartelmy and Dupuy started toward a door.

"Now, if you will excuse us, Dupuy and I will join the ladies," said the judge. "Wheeler, you're not going away yet, eh?" he added.

Brand moved toward the left door and ignored the query.

"What's your hurry, Wheeler?" asked Nolan as Bartelmy and Dupuy disappeared.

"Oh, it's time to get back to the office."

"Hm! What's the trouble?"

"What's the use of talking about it?"

"Come, get it off your chest."

"I don't have to tell you, Mr. Nolan. He drew closer to his employer."

"You think, Mr. Nolan is going back on you, isn't that?"

The young man's voice rang out in his deep disappointment that Nolan was lingering on the verge of an acceptance of Bartelmy's offer which could mean only two things if his employer yielded, and these were the muzzling of the Advance and the silencing of Brand as long as he remained on the paper. He blamed Nolan bitterly for failing to spur him on to outright refusal at the moment.

"Do you think you can accept favors from Bartelmy with one hand, and resist him with the other?"

Nolan gave a spirited but kindly reply.

"Hold your horses, Wheeler. You know I don't care anything about this social stunt for myself. I don't fit into my life but remember I've got a family and nothing comes ahead of them. Mother and I may have a jangle now and then, but after all, we have been side partners for a good many years. And my girl. There ain't a finer educated or a prettier girl in New York, and she ought to be able to go anywhere, but she can't to this town, this cold New York. Then, of course, there's Sylvester. I know he ain't as bright as he might be and I've spent well more than twice your salary trying to get him through fresh meat year at Harvard, and I couldn't, but still he's my son and if he wants to run around with these other sports, why not? I can afford it, and I guess the kid's got to sow his wild oats my way. My wife and children ought to be happy with the money I've got, and as I figure it if I join this Oak Door club I can help them to get what they want. Do you follow me, Brand?"

"Yes, I understand," sighed Brand.

"At first you took up the side of the people and you are continuing at it. But you and your family have become ambitious, or, at least, so far as you are concerned, you are ambitious for them. When you begin to associate familiarly with rich men as their friend you'll soon find yourself playing golf or billiards with one, drinking whiskey with another, and your son will marry the daughter of a third. You will forget all about the people. Your paper will become decadent and feeble. The circulation will dry up." He paused for breath and added warningly in strong tones, "The Advance is now at its zenith, but its decline begins the very day that you are elected to the Oak Door club."

Nolan ran had over and seized Brand by the shoulder.

"Wheeler, you're a decent sort of a fellow. I like you and the things you say. I made the paper stand for, but you don't know what it means to put people that you love on the altar and cause them suffering for the sake of these general principles."

"Don't!" exclaimed the young editor. "Well, that's exactly what I've done. I gave up the girl I loved who had promised to be my wife, so that I might write the truth. In spite of the emotion which his words had aroused in him Brand's voice never faltered as he spoke."

"You," exclaimed Nolan amazed.

"Well, my boy, I don't understand you. I couldn't do that," he confessed.

"Don't think that it was easy for me to do. I've thought of her every hour of every day since, but she's now his voice wavered. Well, she's forgotten, so it doesn't matter. Mr. Nolan, do you remember what it was that first brought us together?"

"Yes, that story about Judge Bartelmy and it was a good one, and you've followed it up with a lot of good ones since. Why, Wheeler, there ain't a man in the country that can work up a series like you can. But, do you know, I'm beginning to think that the judge is not all bad. Mind you, I'm not forgetting old scores, but I'm seeing things."

"Did you ever think of it, perhaps we haven't all the facts of that affair? Some things have happened. Are you sure that it's all as I first wrote?"

"Mr. Nolan, the fact hasn't been told about Judge Bartelmy," cried Brand.

Well, this is getting to be a pretty serious affair. We can't be too sure about our facts."

"Mr. Nolan, Judge Bartelmy is not only a dishonest judge, but he seems to have a destructive influence on every one near him. It's corrupt and corrupting, not only in his public but in his private life."

"Wasn't it his daughter that you were engaged to?"

"Yes, it was, and he's using her just as he did her mother before her."

"You amaze me. What do you mean?"

Brand took a deep breath.

"Why, he surrounded her mother with machine politicians and shady numbers and crooked lawyers. He sent her to the state capital when he wanted to be senator, but it was impossible, to Washington when he wanted to be minister to France, and she failed, and again when he wanted to be judge, and she succeeded, and when she found out that he was using his judicial office to steal and that she had only been a lobbyist for his rotten schemes."

"Well, it killed her, Mr. Nolan, and now he's using his daughter in the same way. He's filling his house with corporation jackals like Dupuy. He sends her here to muzzle you by working on your wife and daughter. He hates me, but he would let her marry me to have his enemy in the family and make him silent."

"Why don't you go to the girl and tell her?" suggested the newspaper owner.

"About her mother and why she died?"

"Well, perhaps not. But I hope you won't follow the Bartelmy story any further. I'll be just as well pleased."

"I've got to follow it, Mr. Nolan. I can't stop," ejaculated Brand. "I've got the goods on him now. I've got a story that will drive him off the bench when we print it."

"What?" half rising.

"True every word of it. Brand paced nervously across the room."

"For God's sake, Wheeler, don't go off at half past eight," cried Nolan.

"Half past eight? Why, I tell you I've got the facts. I've been working on it for months."

"Now, listen to me. You're a young man. In spite of what you say about him I know that in his public life he's mighty well thought of by some of the most prominent men in this city, and"

"weakly," "well, if they believe in him I don't see why"

"Will nothing convince you?" excitedly. "If he should offer me a bribe to kill this story would you acknowledge then that he's a crook?"

"Why, yes, of course I would."

"Will you let me print that story in my own way and promise not to interfere?"

"Yes. But the girl," Nolan reminded him. "How do you think she'll feel if you print that story?"

But Brand was not to be swayed from his purpose.

"It can't be helped. I've got to go on. Somehow you know the thought comes to me that perhaps it all may turn out for the best."

"Well, I hope so," commented the newspaper owner, "but, man alive, this story's hot!"

He was forced to cease abruptly, for Judge Bartelmy and Ed Dupuy entered the drawing room and drew near.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE abruptness with which Brand separated from Nolan as they appeared aroused the suspicions of both the judge and his lobbyist satellite. However, they little imagined the pronounced seriousness of the conversation they had interrupted. In the mind of each ran the thought that the Advance's proprietor and his editor had been discussing the proposal to elect Nolan to the Oak Door club. Even a failure in this laudable venture they would have considered a serious setback, but probably had they an intimation regarding the story Brand wanted to write and the effort that was to be made to detect the judge in offering a money bribe they would have exhibited less of the easy assurance that marked their recurrence into the drawing room.

"Mr. Nolan, I'm afraid I must be going," said Bartelmy. "I hope to see you at my house soon and you, too, Wheeler."

Nolan rose from his chair.

"Judge, can you spare me a few moments?" put in Brand resolutely.

The judge gave a look of surprise.

"Certainly, my boy; certainly. Will you excuse me?" turning to Nolan.

Nolan, surprised at the readiness of Brand to begin on the plan to entrap Bartelmy, readily assented and proceeded into the library with Dupuy.

"Well, Wheeler, what can I do for you?" asked Judge's father.

The young man stepped close to the other and faced him squarely.

"Judge, how about your latest decision in the Lausling iron case today?" he asked.

Bartelmy started back in surprise.

It was in accordance with the statutes and the constitution," he finally said.

The supreme court of the United States was at variance with you in a similar case," advised Brand.

"Sir," indignantly, "I decline to discuss out of court questions relating to my conduct on the bench."

The judge moved as though to go.

"You weren't so particular this morning."

Bartelmy began to lose his confidence, easy pose.

"I fail to comprehend you," he answered.

"Early this morning, between 1 o'clock and 3," went on the unrelenting editor.

The judge turned his head to one side and fidgeted nervously at his gray beard.

"A reporter for the Advance saw you come out of your house at four o'clocks to 1 and walk to a house on Washington avenue that belongs to the attorney for the Lausling iron corporation."

Bartelmy turned his back on Brand, a furtive look coming into his eyes as he did so.

"You knocked at the servants' door, Judge," continued the editor. "This man admitted you. The four and fifty-seven minutes later you left that house by the same door and returned home rapidly on foot. You kept your coat collar turned up, and, contrary to your usual custom, you wore a stouche hat pulled down over your eyes. Half an hour later Dupuy came out of the same house. Ten hours later you handed down your decision reversing on a technicality the judgment of the lower court in the Lausling iron case and freezing out the small stockholders in favor of the insiders, as usual. Those, Judge Bartelmy, are my facts."

Bartelmy made a desperate effort to retain his self control and to command his ability to think clearly and effectively in this dire emergency. At last he spoke after minutely scrutinizing the accusing figure of Brand before him.

"It's easily explained, Mr. Brand," he said in homely tones. "It's a lie; that is all it is. Your reporter lied."

"I was the reporter," exclaimed the owner in a supremely contemptuous manner, and as he spoke he wondered and marveled that such a man as the betrayer, Bartelmy, could be the father of such a girl as Judith—Judith, whom he was even now, he was convinced, putting away from his arms and his love for all time.

The false judge paled. His mouth became parched. Had he not leaned against a chair for support it is likely that his knees would not have retained enough strength to hold him up. The jig was up. Plainly the end was in sight. Indeed, it had already arrived unless—unless— Yes, there was one possible way out—if Brand would listen to the proposal. Listen? Every man had his price. Dupuy had told him so. He knew it anyway, and Brand was poor. He was ambitious too. Ah, reasoned the false judge, that is a dangerous combination—poerty and ambition. Few could overcome it honestly; few ever had, even would. And I am rich—

"Well, what do you propose to do?" he asked of Brand, putting it up to the other man to lead the conversation at this point, just as a clever tactician should.

"That depends," answered Brand doubtfully, a trifle weakly, sinking thoughtfully into a chair beside a table.

Bartelmy detected at once the note of doubt and weakness in Brand's reply, trying to analyze the mental processes of his opponent, who stared at him across the table.

Brand spoke deliberately, in low voice.

"On whether you're willing to meet me halfway."

Bartelmy's hopes immediately surged high. He saw a plan a bid for a price as he had never heard, and he had heard them before. He gazed, reassured, at the young man's earnest face. How skillful he was, this young Brand! How he had deceived every one! Yes, he was just like some of the other reformers the judge had met just like some of the political friends who started to clean up certain conditions, only to be retained to let them exist as they were. But Brand was the cleverest one of the lot by far, and probably he was to divide the proceeds of this bribe with Nolan. Oh, they were a cunning pair! Had even fooled Dupuy, who thought them dangerous. And what a son-in-law Brand would make! Yes, he could have Judith; he was worthy to possess the reigning beauty of a great city. So argued to himself the false judge, and he said:

"Of course I am willing to meet you halfway, but it all depends on whether we understand each other."

"Your decision was doubtless of some value to you, and if I am willing to keep silent about its antecedent circumstances then—"

Brand looked the judge in the eye exultantly.

Bartelmy felt relieved the felt-tarred himself on the fact that his judgment had been correct.

"Yes; you?" He halted.

"Why?" Brand paused.

"Well," queried the judge irritably, "there you are," responded Brand simply, his eyes meeting those of the jurist.

Bartelmy glanced anxiously at the editor, seeking for signs of deception, of a trap, but he found them not.

"Mr. Brand, what do you want?" he asked sharply.

"What's it worth to you?"

"No."

"How about $10,000?" asked the judge.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"I was the reporter," Judge Bartelmy.

"HOW ABOUT $10,000?" ASKED THE JUDGE.

"Yes," agreed Brand, rising—"in cash tonight."

"Rather short notice for such a sum," protestingly. "Where shall I see you?"

"At my office."

"Your office—the Advance? No, no. I prefer you to come to my chambers about noon tomorrow. We shall be quite private there."

"I can't wait that long for it, Judge. I've got to have it tonight."

"Oh, is it something of that sort? Well, then, come to my house after dinner."

"But I've got to be at my office," insisted the editor.

"I hardly like to go there, Mr. Brand."

"That's up to you, Judge. But if you don't come the story goes to press tonight. Well?" with a rising inflection.

Judith Bartelmy entered.

"Will you come now, papa?" she asked.

"Just a moment, my dear. I intended to ask Dupuy to dine with us."

"Oh, can't you take him to the club?" she pouted.

"That wouldn't be convenient, my dear. You know we're going to the opera."

He stepped back toward the library. "Mr. Brand, I'll see you again before you leave."

There was a moment's embarrassed silence between Judith and Wheeler Brand as the judge disappeared.

"How do you do, Mr. Brand?" she finally asked.

"How do you do, Miss Bartelmy?" His manner was awkward and strained. A moment of embarrassed silence.

"I haven't seen you all winter." She placed her hands on the back of a chair near the settee.

"No, I haven't been anywhere. I've been kept pretty close at work." He murmured. "Won't you sit down?"

She moved to the left and occupied the settee. After a few moments of silence she said:

"It's strange I haven't seen you all winter. I suppose it will be another hundred years before I see you again."

Brand looked intently at her.

"It won't be if you wish to see me any sooner, Judith," and, thus speaking, he leaped over the back of the settee toward the girl he loved.

"Why, of course I wish—er— You were having a talk with father when I came in, weren't you?"

"Yes," rising and stepping back from her.

"Wheeler, come here," the girl asked wistfully. "I want to talk to you."

He moved to a chair close by her side. "Aren't you beginning to realize that you may have been a bit headstrong?" she said tenderly, looking into his eyes. "I'm afraid you are getting in very deep. Your friends, most of them, have been patient with you so far, but there's a limit, you know, and you'll lose them."

"I'm sorry."

"Oh, Wheeler," she was intensely earnest—"Is it worth while to let them go just for an idea?"

"A man must act according to his light, Judith."

"And a woman according to hers."

ways feel all that I've lost."

"Haven't you brought it on yourself?" she asked quickly.

Brand seized both her hands, and in a tempest of emotion, long suppressed, he rose and bent over her.

"Oh, dearest, can't we have this one moment?" he was aroused to a pitch she had never seen him reach before—"even if we never have another, without thinking of anything except—except each other?" He seized himself close to her.

"Wheeler, I've a little story I want to tell you," she said fondly, yet sadly. She spoke as one pleading in a vital cause. "Once upon a time there was a girl, and she rather liked a somewhat gloomy young man. But one night something happened and then—they didn't speak for a long time—oh, a very long time. But there were other young men, and one of them has asked to call tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock. He was very serious about it. You see, the girl has been waiting so long that she's beginning to be afraid—afraid that—er— Oh, Wheeler, why won't you drop it all? It's not too late!"

She rose to her feet, still with her hands in his, and in another moment she stood beside him. He threw both his arms around her and held her close to his bosom.

"Judith," he whispered passionately to her.

"Why don't you call tomorrow at 4?" was her response.

As they stood there in fond embrace, her lips raised to his, Judge Bartelmy appeared at the extreme end of the room. He gave a sudden start as he saw their oblivious to all else but themselves. His cold blue eyes shone with the satisfaction that filled him. He had done a good day's work, he congratulated himself. He had arranged to buy Brand's silence for $10,000 when it was really worth twice that sum to a man of the United States judge's wealth and standing. Why, he had originally planned to give Brand twice that sum as a wedding present when he married Judith.

"Mr. Brand," the judge declared, "I will call at your office tonight at 9 o'clock. Judith, I am ready to go now."

The couple drew apart in confusion. She walked away slowly from her lover, her eyes wet with tears. She went out of the room with her father, leaving Wheeler Brand standing in the middle of the room, overcome by the unconquerable sorrow that filled his soul.

The towering figure of Nolan appeared from the library. He stepped toward the editor.

"Well, did you put it through?" he asked.

Brand threw back his head, and his misery was imprinted in every line of his face. Yet by superhuman will power he forced his voice into steadiness as he said:

"Yes, I put it through."

CHAPTER IX.

AT 9 o'clock in the managing editor's room in the Advance building Wheeler Brand and three other men, Howard Bartley, Jeff Thorne, staff reporters, and still, their much inexperienced underlings, were industriously at work. At one side of the office diagonally from the managing editor's desk was a high mahogany desk which backed against a wooden partition which cut off a small room used as a "morgue," the place where newspaper and magazine clippings are kept for reference.

"Perhaps you don't realize it, but that's what I've been trying to do. You know I've been alone a great deal of my life. I've had more responsibility than most girls. I've had to decide things for myself and the younger ones and do the best I could for all of us."

"Yes, I know that. There's nobody like you, Judith."

"I'm glad if you think that."

"I'll always think that, Judith," he exclaimed passionately. "And I'll al-

TURN ON THE LIGHT.

Senator Watkins should not only give that investigating committee the name of his informant, but, for the sake of his own honor, he should relate in such circumstantial detail as to be entirely convincing that he was recklessly repeating idle gossip when he said, in a public meeting:

"I do not know this of my own knowledge, but I know as well as a man can know anything that he has not heard and seen with his own ears and eyes that four senator sold their votes for a total of $20,000."

This charge may be well founded. If it is, the four guilty senators should be summarily dealt with; if it is not, Senator Watkins has put himself in a most unenviable plight. Let the whole truth be known. Owensboro Messenger.

The Messenger is in a whisky town and of course for the whisky interests but surely wrong when it asserts that Senator Watkins has put himself in an unenviable plight.

To the contrary, Senator Watkins, from the proud district, composed of Henderson and Union counties, if impeached would be sent back by an overwhelming vote that would readily show the sentiment of opinion there.

The truth is, Watkins can not be bought and his fearlessness in asserting what he believes to be true, hurts. It is always thus. If false, it would be easily overcome. But the truth thrown in the teeth of a gang who care little for their constituency stings deep. If there were more like Watkins, the banner of truth and right would be waving from every town in Kentucky to-day and there would be happier wives and mothers and fewer drunkards in every house.

Certain Senators were elected by wet constituencies by wet majorities, on wet pledges. There were also certain dry Senators elected by dry constituencies, by dry majorities on dry pledges. Everyone of the former have stuck. Several of the latter have changed something they are pleased to call their "minds." Whatever may be the outcome of the Watkins investigation one thing is settled—the Senators who have opposed the passage of the County Unit bill will have a hard time to explain their votes. They are under grave and serious suspicion. And what is more the Senate cannot send the people to the penitentiary for their thoughts.

The Manufacturers Record last week produced a picture of the new National Bank building soon to be erected in the Spring at Paducah. This new structure will be ten stories high and will cost $200,000. Win. L. Brainert, of Paducah is the Architect and the Falls City Construction Company of Louisville, are the contractors.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

FIELD DAY

In all Churches Sunday Morning
With Union Service at Methodist Church at Night.

Rev. N. A. Palmer, State Superintendent of the Kentucky Anti-Saloon League, will preach the annual sermon. This will be Rev. Palmer's first visit to the city and doubtless he will receive a fine reception. He is a very able man, of spotless character, and has made good as Superintendent of the Minnesota League. The temperance question is the burning issue of today.

New York, Feb. 1: Planning for the biggest birthday present in history to be given by the American people for the father of their country on the 22nd of this month, leaders of the national movement to build a $2,500,000 George Washington Memorial Hall at Washington, D. C., are completing their campaign to assure the project in this city to-day. With the active support of every national patriotic and learned society as well as thousands of public spirited citizens already secured, the George Washington Memorial Association is now confident that the people of this country will join to celebrate Washington's Birthday this year by offering this living monument to carry out Washington's wish for the "general diffusion of knowledge." If every American will lend hand during the next few weeks, it is declared, this great auditorium, sadly needed by all the national organizations of the country may be started on the 178th anniversary of the birth of the first president. Hundreds of members of the Washington Academy of Sciences the National Federation of Art, the National Academy of Sciences and the American Medical Association, as well as of the Grand Army of the Republic, the United Confederate Veterans, the Daughters of the American Revolution and other patriotic bodies are to-day actively working to enlist the support of the people in every section of the country for this Washington memorial. Thousands of children in the schools of every state in the Union are also reported to be calling upon their playmates to give a dime to buy one brick in the great structure that will carry out Washington's last wish. Preachers, teachers and public speakers are volunteering from many communities to rally their townsmen for the big Washington's Birthday project. In every town in the land it is proposed to hold mass meetings and raise funds for this birthday gift of the American people to George Washington.

To "promote institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge" according to the parting admonition of Washington to his people, is the object of the proposed headquarters and auditorium that is to be built for all the learned societies of the Nation in his name. Leaders in scientific and educational work to-day assured Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, president of the George Washington Memorial Association, who is the leading the movement at 25 East 60th street in this city, that the present lack of adequate convention facilities at Washington is seriously hampering their progress as well as shaming this country in the eyes of the learned societies of other Nations. Nothing could further the spread of science and knowledge better than the erection of such an institution as the George Washington Memorial Hall, they declare. "Every American owes a moral debt to George Washington whose last request of his people was for just such an institution as we hope to see raised in his name," said Mrs. Dimock to-day. "It is to carry on the dearest wish of our first president that we are asking all loyal Americans to contribute to the establishment of the George Washington Memorial Hall which we are assured is the thing most needful to promote knowledge in the Nation to-day. Every contributor will receive a certificate as a holder of a perpetual interest in the big building as well as a souvenir button from our headquarters at 25 East 60th street, where substantial support is always being received from all over the country."

NOTICE TO COUNTY UNION.

To all who have pooled their tobacco in the Farmers Union pool, we wish to say that after this week we will not receive any tobacco until we have a good season, for the reason that we wish to make our expense as little as possible, which we can not do while the tobacco is coming 1 or 2 and 3 loads a day. So we insist that you get your tobacco ready as soon as possible and bring it in and be sure and class it right and not have it high enough in order to be in a damaging condition, and you will be satisfied with the price. The pooling papers are now out for this 1910 crop and we want to urge for your good and the good of the order that every Farmers Union man in the county pool their tobacco.

It is being said that some on the outside have got better prices than was gotten in the pool, this is doubtful, but suppose it to be true we know that these prices were obtained while the Farmers Union and the Steaming District were holding their pools at 8 cents. But after the pools were sold we challenge the man to show that he obtained a better price than the pools. The buyers invariably tell us that they much prefer to buy the tobacco on pools and advise that everybody pool, as they say it is much less expense to them and more satisfactory than having their agents ride all over the county to buy, consequently they can pay more for it. Now let every man do his duty and prosperity for the whole country is ours.

J. P. PIERCE,
Chairman Committee.

Constipation Cure Free

With the first signs of constipation you resort to the home methods of relief, such as hot or cold water on arising, lots of stewed fruit with your breakfast, etc., but what do you do when these fail?

The majority then start on salts and purgative waters, then change to cathartic pills, etc. If you have gone through these various stages you know they were all useless, so far as permanent results go. Now you should try just once again, but try something practical and sensible, a remedy made and intended for the purpose you are trying to accomplish. Such a remedy, as thousands can testify, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is guaranteed to be permanent in its results. Its ingredients are such that by a brief use of it the stomach and bowel muscles are trained to again do their work normally, so that in the end you can do away with medicines of all kinds. That it will do this Mr. G. Y. Dodson of Seville, Va., will gladly attest, and so will Mrs. S. A. Hampton of Portage, O.

To those who are still skeptical there is a way to prove these assertions without a penny of expense. Simply send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and obtain a free sample bottle. After using it, if you are then convinced it is the remedy you need, buy a fifty-cent or one dollar bottle of your druggist and continue to use it for a brief time until cured. The directions are simple and the dose is small. It is pleasant to the taste, does not gripe and is promptly effective, and these statements are guaranteed or money will be refunded.

This remedy is over a quarter of a century old and is personally taken by more druggists than any other similar remedy on the American market. Because of its effectiveness, purity and pleasant taste it is the ideal laxative remedy for children, women and old folks generally. Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 1100 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

De Forest, Wis.—"After an operation four years ago I had pains down in both sides, backache, and a weakness. The doctor wanted me to have another operation. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am entirely cured of my troubles."—Mrs. AUGUSTE VESCHMANN, De Forest, Wis.

Another Operation Avoided.—New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. ## MY TRIP TO NIAGARA FALLS

By Mrs. W. N. Rochester.

I want to thank my friends who still continue to solicit me to write up our trip for the honor conferred on me over my earnest protest. I fear that my description will not measure up to the standard that you will expect or that I might wish. The task would not seem arduous if I was not sure there were others in the party more capable.

My son and I left Marion, August 2nd, 1909, would have had a long lay over in Princeton, but learned we could get a train to Central City so we spent the night with my brother's family there. At Cecilian Junction a large party got on the train going to Niagara Falls and one of the number stopped and gave me a hasty hand shake, but whom I marked. For I know that is some Methodist sister and sure it was, we met at the Missionary Convention at Greenville. We set out in the morning at eight o'clock, and it took me a week to do as we liked. We got on a car and took to the precinct part of the city, including Cave Hill Cemetery, the beautiful city of the dunes.

We then repaired to the 10th street station and found a large number of cars. We were to be personally conducted by Prof. Moore and Mr. Cranley. I was to chaperon three young ladies, two of them I had never seen. Our party numbered 100, seven young men and the others were matrons, school matrons and young ladies. We were not able to find either of our conductors, but when the train pulled up placarded with all aboard for Niagara Falls, we all with one accord got aboard the car. In a few minutes a man came through the car with a look of inquiry depicted on his face and when I found it was Prof. Moore, I at once made known a change came over him at once, he said the lady from Morganfield that you are to chaperon and I have walked miles over the station looking for you. The trip from Louisville to the Falls was without incident, when night came on and the porter got busy preparing the beds something serious got wrong with my breathing and by the time he was through I had my pillow making a hasty retreat to the day coach, there I met a lady who like myself could not stand the closeness of a sleeper, that assisted me in making a good bed from the seat and two of the backs.

We arrived at Niagara City at 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning and went to the Temperance Hotel where we found a good breakfast awaiting us. As we hurried from the Hotel to Prospect park urged on in our race by the swelling notes of the mighty Niagara Anthem. Niagara is one of the great wonders of the world, no less wonderful because time and much thought must be brought to bear in comprehending it. They were so marvelously and wonderfully beautiful. We all felt the rush of excitement and expectancy when we paused, pressed to the very verge of the land which might well be termed the Brink of Eternity. We were awed by the beauty of the scene and were reduced to a sense of our own littleness and almost rendered speechless as all others were at the mighty wonders that confronted us, and not a single wonder, but a great volume of wonders bound compactly together.

When one recovers from the first emotional effect of this grand spectacle and has realized something of its unique combination of grandeur matchless beauty and power, the spirit of inquiry is at once aroused in us. From Prospect point we see the American falls, American rapids, Horse shoe and Luna falls. From there we went on the Canadian side and saw the same but different views. We donned our rubber coats preparing for a trip in the Mail of the Mist steamer to get a perfect view of the mighty cataract.

One who misses this trip fails to see Niagara in all its grandeur and it is only from the hurricane deck that one is able to drink in the beauty of the mighty display of the Creator's great handiwork. Carriages we then ordered for a drive in the parks, we left the carriages and walked over Goat Island bridge and through Luna Island, three Sister Island and little Brother Island. These Islands afford endless delight, picturesque scenery abounds everywhere. The shores of the Island are skirted by the most delightful lovers lanes, which are made safe as well as beautiful by rustic railing a long the waters edge.

From there we drove to the Home of the shredded wheat, we found a magnificent building, a large convention hall with seating capacity of over 1000 and a large dining room where they gave their employees their noon day meal free of charge and beautiful rest room and numerous boths, after being shown through the building we were invited to the dining room and served free of charge with their products. Should I ever have not living to make to the Home of the shredded wheat I would go.

One day of sight seeing over we had the evening at our disposal we visited some of the curious statues in which Niagara abounds. I saw Mrs. Anna Edison Taylor who shot the Horse Shoe falls Oct. 24, 1910, in a barrel. Niagara is a most beautiful city by night by night the lights are so artistically arranged. Thursday was planned for the Great George trip to Lewistown and from there to Toronto, Canada. To attempt to describe this wonderful trip would be but to admit one inadequacy to the task. The car reveals its way along the waters edge at the foot of the rock cliff and as the tumbling tossing waters roll towards us we realize more than ever the enormous force and the overwhelming power of the river of rivers.

We pass the devil's hole so interesting in history, we almost feel the cruel eddy as we ride along so near its edge. We now come to the wonder of wonders, the whirl pool rapids where wave after wave dashes mountains high and then plunges fathoms deep, when the turbulent waters seem to be going in every direction when the most enormous rocks appear and disappear as if by magic. Gradually we began to ascend as we advance each step we behold something new and wonderful this trip affords a great variety of scenery of striking picturesqueness.

We arrived at Lewistown and ate our breakfast on the steamer, we were on deck all the way and could see in the distance Brooks monument towering 200 feet high. Brooks was in Canada what Washington was in the United States, a little farther on we saw Old Fort Niagara in close proximity to it a stone house built by the French and has stood the ravages of time since 1725. We were out of sight of land for sometime, when we reached Toronto, we all took a Trolley drive. We were much surprised to see such a magnificent city, with its immense business houses, its churches, school facilities, museums, pressed and hotels while numerous a transients can not get anything to eat on Sunday.

We went into the Parliament building. I have the honor of sitting in the chairs said to have been occupied by the King and Queen. There is a square in Toronto noted for Salvation (church) education (school building) Starvation (Hotel) and damnation (Brewery.) There are no saloons in the city. We drove to the Price George Hotel, after partaking of a sumptuous dinner beautifully served, we had the afternoon to do as we pleased, most of us spent it in the great stores which Toronto abounds. Simpsons is the largest store in Canada and all tourist center there.

While driving the guide pointed out King James Cathedral and in it was the largest organ in the world, one of the ladies in my car got the idea that her trip would be greatly marred if she did not see King James Cathedral and the large organ, from where we were in looked very near yet proved to be so far. We finally got on the inside and took a last view of the wonderful structure and its lofty domes reverently touching the organ. I turned to depart and found my friend in the attitude of prayer, I was conscious of the fact we had no time to linger for prayer, but most men and pray as we can that the steamer might not leave us. There is one thing I shall always be thankful for and that is that we did not get arrested before we left Toronto. I ran into a newsboy, knocked his papers helter skelter. There is no telling the fate of a man I weighed with if it had not been for his two fifty pounds or there abouts avoirdupois.

We were more than glad when we found the steamer waiting for us. After we got some china from the delivery booth (I am sure Prof. Moore will long remember that box of china and I have pointed it out) I gave the party to visit me and I will serve you out of it) when arrived at the steamer I was looking very much like a boiled lobster, and calapsed. I have forgotten but I can not forget that 6 o'clock dinner I missed on the account of King James Cathedral. I never have my favor which was a had bloom Canadian rose baked in beautiful form.

We were indebted to the mayor of Niagara for the moonlight view of Niagara, we left the hotel at 10:30 p. m., to see Niagara falls by moonlight beggars description, no tongue can tell or pen portray its rare beauties. It is a dream picture, the notes of the mighty cataract makes us know all this beauty is real. The last day of our stay was spent in another view of the falls and a visit to the great electrical power plant, it is the largest electrical generator ever constructed generating thousands of horse power. In the afternoon we went to Buffalo and spent five hours there. Tourists visiting that city are impressed by three things, the cleanliness, asphalt streets and bright lights at night, the first and last is largely the result of Niagara electric power.

When taking an automobile ride we passed the Mithoron House where President McKinley died. We took supper at the Ingonis Hotel and at 9 o'clock we started for home. By this time the party was very well acquainted and we were a comfortable lot. In the party was two moons, one new, the other old, they were not the shining kind. A Leon, but no one was devoured, a Rymer, but no verses, a Comfort and little was with one Overall not the kind men wear when not on dress parade, a Cook, but nothing to eat and two Hotels but whose service appeases hunger, two Oldhams, but not the frying kind.

When we got to Louisville our train was waiting. My brother R. Y. Thomas was aboard getting home from that belated congress, we stayed over night with him. Arrived home at 8 o'clock on Sunday morning. The conductor on the last division said it was well we were getting home or my ticket would have to be duplicated it was to a frazzle. This was the trip of my life. We stopped in the best hotels and had the very best service, our conductors were so very courteous to everyone and took so much pains to see that I had a good time. I never saw so much for as little expense in my life.

Stops Lameness

Much of the chronic lameness in horses is due to neglect. See that your horse is not allowed to go lame. Keep Sloan's Liniment on hand and apply at the first sign of soreness. It's wonderfully penetrating, goes right to the spot, relieves the soreness, restores the joints and makes the muscles elastic and pliant.

Here's the Proof.
Mr. G. I. Roberts of Resaca, Ga. writes: "I have used Sloan's Liniment on a horse for some time and effected a thorough cure. I have removed a splinter from the joint and the horse is now sound. This is the best remedy for lameness and sore shins I have used."

Dear Sir:—

Will tell you of some of my travels this month.

On the 11th I left home for Texas. I went via Memphis, bought ticket winter tourist ticket June limit to Waco and return for $23.70. I found that big snow lasted below Pine Bluff, Ark. We ate breakfast in Texarkana and it was raining just a little, since then I have seen no rain, snow or fog. The air is clear and warm like May. The country looks like South Carolina some, ground dry and hard, no mud at all, absolutely none. I stopped 2 days with Jim, my brother, at Tyler, Texas. He is doing well there, likes Texas fine. Waco has thirty thousand inhabitants. Have driven 9 days since out here. The land is level as a plain and can see 5, 10 and 15 miles.

The fields are full of Cactus, which reminds one of turtles in Arkansas, only the Cactus is standing on end. Business is extremely good for raw territory for us.

The biggest curiosity to me is the jack rabbits, which look like young goats, are about 12 inches high, 2 1-2 feet long weighing from twelve to twenty-two pounds.

A friend took me out in his big automobile last Friday evening to hunt jack rabbits. I jumped one and cut down on him and crippled it and the other barrel failed to fire, it run faster than cotton tail rabbits with its leg broken. This part of Texas is very prosperous, cotton very high. Grown people here never saw an apple tree, so while the rabbit is a sight to me, I guess my sixty acre apple orchard would be a sight to them.

But there is one other thing here I saw several of, it is the Chappeneel Cock or running wild turkey of Mexico, it is slim, 1 foot high, 2 feet long and can not fly. I slipped upon one and threwed at it and saw why they don't fly, it is not necessary. They run faster than any animal or machine Ancient or Modern. It runs faster than, Ollie James in the Pennerle, and you know that's running some. That is one thing that even Teddy can not beat. Best wishes.

Misses Enda Minner, Byrd

This contractor got results.

Some years ago a contractor building a railroad in a warm climate was troubled a great deal by sickness among the laborers.

He turned his attention at once to their food, and found that they were getting full rations of meat and were drinking water from a stream near by.

He issued orders to cut down the amount of meat and to increase greatly the quantity of Quaker Oats fed to the men.

He also boiled Quaker Oats and mixed the thin oatmeal water with their drinking water. Almost instantly all signs of stomach disorders passed and his men showed a decided improvement in strength and spirits. This contractor had experience that taught him the great value of good oatmeal.

The cost was small; 10c for regular size packages; it is also packed in hermetically sealed tins for hot climates.
